I'm saving the...

...elephants

"I say elephants don't belong in circuses," says Carol Buckley, 48, a founder of The Elephant Sanctuary in Tennessee, a natural habitat refuge for Asian elephants. The mission is a personal one: The reformed Buckley used to tour circuses with an elephant act. (Visit elephants.com.)

...mountain lions

Jill Giel, 34, lead keeper of California's Folsom City Zoo Sanctuary, has saved everything from mountain lions to hawks, but she's proudest of the sanctuary's adoption program for the offspring of "Premarin mares," horses whose urine is used for the menopause drug. Otherwise, "the foals may be sold into slaughter," says Giel.

...bears

"For nine months, I'm their mom," says Sally Maughan, 56, of the cubs she shelters at her Idaho Black Bear Rehabilitation Center, one of the nation's oldest such facilities. The cubs, orphaned due to hunters or natural disasters, are returned to the wild. (See bearrehab.org.)
